Lost Things.

There are a great many things lost that are found again, and a great many others that are lost and never found. There are reputations lost, which can never be regained; there are hopes lost which come not back again; there are joys and friendships—there are thoughts and talents lost, which are never found. Every man has at some time some thing lost, which he would give the world, if it were his, to recover. It may have been but a single pearl from the thread of friendship, or a mere hope of his soul, but it was precious to him, and life is sad and dark without it. The smallest things are oftentimes the dearest to the heart of man, for instance, a little wife, a little heir, a little fortune, a little home. What wonder, then, that when they are lost, he should offer all things for their recovery?—See. Am. Journal.

Sir Walter Scott's Visit To Rome.
The house where Sir Walter Scott lived while in Rome is to be commemorated, we read, by a marble slab. The municipal authorities of Rome are more careful and liberal than those of most other cities in paying this sort of homage to illustrious visitor. High up in the Corso, near the Piazza del Popolo, is a slab to mark the house where Goethe "thought and wrote immortal things;" and many other great modern guests of Rome have their memories preserved in the same way. Somewhat unfortunate is the more recent addition, not, however, made by Roman sentiment, to the memorials of a marble slab with an old sort of acrostic placed near his sad tomb, under the shadow of the pyramid of Caius Cestus. The association of Scott's name with that of Rome is almost entirely melancholy. Scott looked upon Rome amid the decay and decline of his intellect and his health. He had long dreamed of visiting Italy, and especially Rome, and when he came to the "City of the Soul" he had no longer the spirit or the strength to take interest in what he saw. He had to be hurried away from Rome, and reached his own riverside only in time to die within hearing of the murmur of its waters. Still the municipality of Rome are none the less right in paying tribute to his memory, and their good example ought to be followed by the inhabitants of other towns. See. Am. Journal.

The International Clothing Company,

Corner of Broadway and Broom Streets.

A. M. MELLIS, Esq.,

NEW YORK CITY, Dec. 6th, 1881.

Honolulu, Sandwich Islands.

Dear Sir: Your valued favor of November 18th is to hand, containing your order to which we have given our closest attention, and you may rest assured we have spared no pains to make this initial order satisfactory, having closely followed your instructions, sincerely hoping by fair dealing to secure your entire patronage in the Clothing Line.

We are willing to make you our Special Agent for the Hawaiian Islands, and consequently can offer you Special Inducements on prices, as we are thoroughly satisfied that a proper representation of our goods will, as has always been the case in the past, take precedence above all other makes of Ready Made Clothing, as we are here, driving our competitors out of the market.

We inclose you a large and varied selection of samples of our Spring and Summer Stock for 1882 now being manufactured. They comprise many Novelties and are especially adapted for the Tropical Climates.

We have shipped your goods as requested via Panama, San Francisco, and by steamer to the care of your Agents, and you will find in this letter your bill of lading, &c. Hoping for an early continuance of your patronage.

We remain, very truly yours,
The International Clothing Co., DONALD FITZGERALD, President.
N. B.—As it is my intention to visit the colonies of Australia shortly, I shall stop to see you on my way. Yours above.

With the above I take pleasure in informing the public that I have opened a full line of

Boots, Shoes and Slippers

of all descriptions and styles, which I will sell at as lower price as this market will admit. Thanking the public in general for past favors received, I shall endeavor, as heretofore, to please them with their wants.
